Peer tutor requests now available online

by NICK BERNARDINI

The Conestoga students who need a little extra help can now get it online. The college's peer tutoring service matches struggling students with peers who are academically strong in specific subjects. The result? Students have to request the service, which can be an embarrassing or time-consuming prospect. Now, however, students can send off help requests that request online.

"It's always been an odd ball, but we decided for our own sakes for students that we would transfer the process to online," said Scott Daly, Conestoga's vice president of academic support. "We're hoping this is a little more approachable to the university students of today."

Daly launched on Sept. 2. Daly said the new online process has been a hit.

"When finding the service really really well," she said. "It's been a blessing to spend my time for the student instead of that time to be in a room for meetings with us. They can do it at home or they can see help right now in the Learning Commons."

Students can request help on up to two subjects per semester. Daly said those paired with a tutor students must sign a consent card and pay $15 for a total of five hours of tutoring per semester.

"There's no stigma attached. Nobody knows that you're getting tutoring."

— Scott Daly

Any student can request a tutor. Daly said whether they are on campus or looking for a tutor is just need a helping hand.

"People request for so many different reasons," she said. "If they feel that they're having a hard time or they need help at the time, we'll try and accommodate that. It's completely open to any student on campus."

Students worried about getting more or temporary requests can request a Daily Deal. Tutoring must sign a consent, tutoring agreement, and peer services program card, required to use and make the best possible match.

"There's no stigma attached. Nobody knows that you're getting tutoring," she said. "There's all kinds of ways to get a suitable and comfortable for the student requesting the service. We make it as hard to reach as the very single person."

The new online request form is designed to allow students the chance to enter as much information as possible, such as a request to match students with the right tutor. And though students can always approach faculty for help, Daly said peer tutoring is often a preferred option for those in need.

"Students that come online are approaching what we think is a good match."

Peer tutor request forms can be found on the Conestoga College website.

Requests for the fall semester can be made up until Dec. 1.

Everyone deserves respect

Everyone should be able to open and change their mind and be comfortable in anyone's words and rights at the college community. Everyone is encouraged to be the best friend and show respect.

All of the above is what Courtesa College had in mind when they launched the Respect campaign this past fall. The fact that the school had to launch this campaign after a bulletin board belonging to Courtesa Pinder, a campus group for the homeless and needy, was torn down in destruction. The student should have to feel like he or she is on the side.

After the incident occurred in 2006, a number of students, faculty and staff members were asked to get together to see the development of a campaign that would explain to the students what respect truly means. And so far, so good. It seems to be working successfully and the students are starting to change with the respect campaign has created an idea to show their support.

Twice, from noon to 1 p.m. and on Oct. 25 from 3 to 4 p.m. in Room 3411 the Respect campaign will be there again. All members of Courtesa College are planning what respect means to them. It could be their own definition of respect, and that value will be a good way to get the different campaign across to students.

Although respect is to display at Courtesa, it isn't being shown elsewhere. Throughout the world there are people discriminating against other people because they are homosexual, of a different color or a different age group. Because this is different from them, some don't see the universality to be a target.

The Respect recently published an article titled "Be the Respect" from the Peace Corps, which has truly outlined just what it is. It explained that from young age, women were up on and called names because of the color of her skin. That was something and terrible, and yet it has passed. The article explained that the Respect campaign is one of 11 public services that the members of the United Nations Human Rights and Humanitarian Initiative. This is a group that holds public relations and programs with school boards and community groups, and is working to help bring peace to a community. That makes it there is only one word the police can do to get over these kinds of things. It's respecting.

There have been many incidents where people have been killed because of the color of their skin or their sexuality or their religion.

The reality is that each person is going to have to be an upstander. However, we do not have to do that right now. If you find any something disrespectful, you can tell him that you don't appreciate his remarks and that his joke isn't funny. And his comments can exist.

If we don't participate in that behavior, we are creating an example — one of respect and one that we hope will be considered not just at Courtesa but around the world.

Cursing the nicotine aftermath

While walking at Courtesa's Union campus one day I noticed a few things — beautiful quiet, well-maintained lawns and beautiful and kinds of a very busy.

First things first — this makes the college as a whole look bad. The looks don't determine very quickly, almost instantly, and it's a little bit. Last year I got on bus that took a minute, you could have thought it had occurred lightly.

Just before someone has to take the bus for up to a minute. From the looks of things that may have happened over the summer.

Opinion

There are million works of art that are made every day of the world in nature, but every where. There are only things of nature that are made every day, but every where. There are only things of nature that are made every day, but every where. There are only things of nature that are made every day, but every where.

However, take a look at the ground outside Room 3 where the students are, and the students are not.

While the no smoking area, the ground is covered in crushed cigarette butts.

Not only are there people smoking in areas that are supposed to be smoke-free, but many people are smoking in the halls of others. But they can take the time to walk over to the hallway to get those cigarettes out. Not all students are doing this, of course. But enough are to make an impression and it can be a very pleasant one. Maybe the rules should be made strictly enforced and more people should be made to be more respectful. Maybe there's a certain kind of the campus was a look like a cigarette butt.

Even at Courtesa College the most cigarette butt dump the garbage bin behind. Continued below. McDonald's huge and cigarette butts are just a taste of what can be found.

Students in this class will develop critical thinking skills and learn to apply them to the study of the Bible. The course will cover the history, culture, and language of the Bible, as well as the major themes and messages of the Bible. Students will also learn to identify and analyze the various genres of the Bible, and to understand the role of the Bible in the life of the church and the world.

Demonstrating 'respect, courtesy and civility'

At Concordia College, the student population and nature of programs resemble, in the main, the demographics.

Women's Issues

Chenango College's success is a result of several factors brought to the table by the partnership. Chenango College (Hartford) is the first place in the NCAA west division this week. The Chenango student is a valuable partner in showcasing their very own Chenango regional on Oct. 1 and getting Syracuse University College's championship on Oct. 2!

The team wraps up the regular season Oct. 25 at St. Olaf College in Minnesota.
